SILENCE

What dignity in silence! What strength in that virtue which all souls must cultivate who are striving for perfection! Silence about ourselves, about those dear to us, about our past, our present, our virtues, our faults; silence upon all the details of our life; perfect silence is the slow elimination of self. Nothingness guards silence. Nothingness makes no sound. To efface one's self is to be passed by. Obscurity is never molested.

If it be true that so much light is needed to speak wisely, how far greater is the need of such light if we would guard our silence. Lowered eyes, closed lips are double doors. They shut in the loved One Who dwells in our hearts, alone with us and we with Him.
