If union with God is the meaning of the monastic vocation, then the soul must learn to search for God's love and abide in it. The soul must learn the mystery of God's presence, must learn to recognize the inflection of His Voice. The presence of God is hidden; His Voice comes from behind a cloud.

Thus when St. Benedict tells us to "incline the ear of your heart" he is telling us to listen in FAITH. As the religious vocation unfolds, it is seen to be nothing else but the life of FAITH. Observance would be useless without faith. The vows would be impossible without faith. Faith is the secret of the whole thing, and the only guarantee of love.

Faith expresses itself in OBEDIENCE. OBEDIENCE is to faith what humility is to truth and what homage is to beauty. Where faith is strong, obedience follows - - AUTOMATICALLY! Through the Rule, St. Benedict will be seen building up the life of Faith. That is why he makes, throughout the Rule, so much of the Holy Vow of Holy Obedience. Holy Obedience is the sign and the seal of the Monastic Life.
