Repeated from Bulletin # 304
 In the 1960's NONDIRECTIVE THERAPY was introduced in convents and religious houses for men and women (moreso for women). As a consequence, these multitudes of religious men and women NO LONGER wanted to be under anyone's direct authority! The ONLY authority these people very soon came to accept and understand was the AUTHORITY OF THEIR IMPERIAL INNER SELVES! - - no superior can survive or be effective under these conditions. Convents soon became hardly more than boarding houses full of "IMPERIAL INNER SELVES" - each one doing his or her own thing. We all know what has happened to places once renowned for their holiness and sanctity. Religious institutions for women have, in most cases, been effective instruments for the development of the spirituality of SELF! (turn page)
