Frater John White, OSB

Uphold me, O Lord, according to Thy word and I shall live, and confound me not in my expectation.

No matter what the monk may be called upon to do; no matter where duty may direct his feet, the monk has his face turned toward the desert. The ears of the monk are not attuned to the echoes of the thunder that storms the city of Babylon. Unlike the ears of Everyman, the ears of the monk are attuned to the silence of the far away mountains on which the armies of God and of the enemy confront one another in a mysterious and deadly battle.
